

Introducing Next Level Urgent Care Home Visits

We recognize that many people are avoiding medical facilities right now. In fact, emergency rooms have seen a 33 percent reduction in patients with heart attacks and strokes since the onset of COVID-19. While we understand and support the public's desire to stay at home during this time, fear should never stand in your way of getting high quality medical care, especially for a condition that needs immediate treatment.

In an effort to offset this trend, we have decided to try out an approach that would allow Next Level medical care to come to you. Beginning May 1st, Next Level will begin making house-calls in the Katy area. House calls may be scheduled for a self-pay rate of $250 for the first person and $200 for each additional household member.

When does it make sense to use us for a house call?

- You've injured yourself while doing a home improvement project.
- You're suffering from allergies or a sinus infection.
- You're dehydrated and need IV fluids.
- You have a chronic illness and have been unable to see your doctor to get a medication refill or would like a full physical exam to make sure you're doing okay.

Next Level Urgent Care is fully committed to both the safety of our patients and our staff. All staff members are provided with appropriate personal protective equipment that they will wear throughout the duration of your visit. Patients are more than welcome to ask our staff members for advice on how to keep their family safe as our community begins to return to work.

Finally, due to our loyal patient-base in the area, we felt that Katy would be the best place to try this service out. However, if it is well received, we may consider expanding into other areas.

Stay healthy, everyone,

Juliet Breeze, MD
